Are you a clinician, service provider or trainee who has experience in helping youth with disabilities find employment?

Consider participating in a study about evaluating an evidence-based toolkit that was co-created with clinicians on gender-sensitive care within the context of vocational rehabilitation.

What is this study about?

We want input from clinicians, service providers and trainees as we evaluate evidence-based toolkits that aims to help clinicians' gender-sensitive approaches within the context of employment.

Who can participate?

We are looking for:

- Clinicians, service providers, trainees (e.g., occupational therapist, job coach, vocational counsellor) who has relevant experience in helping youth with disabilities to find and maintain employment.
- Willingness to be audio recorded

What's involved?

- A focus group via zoom (approx. 1.5 hours) and/or
- A survey (approx. 30 minutes)

Potential Benefits?

- There are no direct benefits of participating, but it may help us to learn how our intervention influences gender-sensitive approaches.

Participants will receive a small token of appreciation to thank them for their time.
